Watching Charlotte Grow

Airport analysts say offering more nonstop, long-haul destinations will help Charlotte's airport grow. The international destinations that Charlotte passengers want to fly to, but currently require a layover, include the Vancouver and Ontario areas of Canada, Cagle said.

Other top destinations are in the United States, including Albuquerque, N.M., Honolulu and Orange County, Calif., he said.

Roughly 12 million Atlanta passengers, or about 12 percent, were traveling to and from international destinations in 2017. In Charlotte, roughly 3.3 million passengers, or about 7 percent were traveling internationally.

Last summer, American Airlines announced plans to add a nonstop to Munich in March. At the time, the Charlotte Chamber said that more than 200 German companies in the city employ about 17,000 people.

Introducing edge:

online marketing courses
for aviation professionals.

Something our clients have told us over the years is that while there are a lot of marketing courses and training opportunities, there aren't many that are focused on the aviation world.

We wanted to change that.

So, we created Edge. Edge is a unique online learning experience for aviation professionals that includes videos, worksheets and live interaction with us and fellow classmates.

Whether you're a veteran airport marketer, new to the aviation world, new to marketing, or somewhere in-between, you can take your marketing game to the next level with Edge.
